i believe the microsoft case has gone on long enough. with all the problems the country has now we should get on with the future and not have att gen's of the various drag the case on longer. considering the anti cigarette debacle with the states missusing huge amounts of funds, it makes little sense to allow them to attempt hurting a company that has been so innovating and successful in expanding the tech world. they have been an asset to the country and their pricing has kept the cost of computing reasonable for all of us.
